In-Equalities In Taxation

Edgerton Post Office
24th Nov'r 1919

To the Editor.,
Chauvin Chronicle
Dea Sir

We enclose herewith, a return compiled from official figures, showing (1) the amount of Supplementary Revenue Tax charged in the year 1918 in the respective Municipalities of the Vale and of Ribstone; and (2) the amounts that would have been charged on lands assessed at the same value in within districts, and (3) the amounts surcharged on the rural dweller, the Farmer. You will see, Sir, that in the two municipalities, this surcharge amounts, in round figures, to $8,000.00

This information ought to interest your readers and cause the dwellers in rural lands to take such concerted action as will lead to a more equitable distribution of this impost.

We are, Dear Sir,
Yours respectfully

1919 Was A Bad Year For Hail Insurance Co.s

Hail Losses Sustained In Saskatchewan Very Heavy, In Many Cases Exceeding Premium Income

A. E. Fisher, superintendent of insurance for Saskatchewan, is preparing a special hail insurance report dealing with the operations of the hail insurance companies in Saskatchewan for 1919. While the figures are not fully compiled the reports already received show that the hail insurance losses sustained by the companies operating in Saskatchewan were very heavy this year.

LOANS

The Cheapest Rate for Farm Buildings is quoted at Forty Cents per $100 per annum; Three years for $1.20 per $100; and this rate is only quoted by the WAWAESA MUTUAL ASSURANCE COMPANY. This is a purelyfarmers' company, and handles only farm property

INSURE NOW AND FEEL SAFE

Canadian Pacific Railway Lands: Call in and see the price list: 20 years terms, one-tenth cash payment with application; no further payment of capital until the fourth year. Interest at six per cent per annum. If the necessahy improvements are executed in the first year, the interest will be reduced to two per cent for two years. This is a good proposition, and these lands are being rapidly absorbed Do not delay until too late, as these lands will be turned over again at a big profit.

Hudsons Bay Lands. I have the latest prices on all the holdings of the Hudsons Bay Company and am ready to quote you at any time. The terms are:—8 equal payments with interest at seven per cent per annum. The prices are now down to a very low figure, and these lands are sure to turn out to be a good business proposition. Values will soar again, and the H.B. Lands are mighty good buying at present quotations. That quarter alongside your own will make a fine addition to your farm; and, believe me, it is better to be in on the ground floor when you buy.

Loan Companies have all kinds of Money to Loan on Improved Farm Property, Fist Mortgage. I am advised by one of the most reliable firms that their great concern at the present time is to find sufficient applications to take up this surplus money. Interest at eight per cent. Five or ten year terms. No commissions charged to the Mortgagor; and the costs of obtaining same were never so low as at the present time. If you are interested. call or write; but remember that there is no shortage of cash for this purpose.

Five companies reported losses far exceeding their premium income Eleven companies have lost ratios between 75 and 100 per cent of their premium and the rest have losses which average as high as 65 per cent of their premium income. These figures show that 1919 was the most unfavourable year for all hail insurance companies operating in Saskatchewan

Sask Government Completes Plans Aiding Settlers

Arrangments Have Now Been Made For Relief Of Needy Settlers

The provincial government has now completed its plans for the relief of needysettlers in those portions of the province where the cop was a failure. The relief will consist of coal, flour and clothing. The value of the coal and flour will represent a loan to the individual and the clothing is to be gathered free of charge by the women's organizations of the province and is being distributed free of charge through the Provincial Bureau of Labour. In municipal municipalities the distribution of relief will be undertaken by the rural municipal council.

assistance by the way of guaranteed credit for this purpose being provided by the government, which will also exercise supervision over quantities distributed and prices paid by the municipalities for the goods. The plan involves municipal responsibility and also the use of local sources of supply as far as possible.

The government has been negotiating with the Dominion government regarding Dominion co-operation and also regarding a plan for providing relief for homesteaders who have not yet received their patents, but up to the present time no final agreement has been reached. In any event all needy cases of any nature will be dealt with. Feeling that the matter cannot be delayed any longer without he possibility of serious suffering, the provincial government has decided to go ahead with the work, and, if possible, reach an arrangement with the Dominion government regarding their co-operation later.

CREDIT TRADING ADDS TO COST

The first business transaction was an exhibition of the stronger acquiring at the expense of the weaker, or at least that is what some authorities would have us believe. The original conception of the lately defeated ideal that 'Might is Right.'

During the many centuries that have passed since that first business transaction the science of trade has gradually developed.
It would require a large volume to outline the developement from a primitive exercise of strength—to-day condemned as theft—to the basis of exchange of values as we have today. It is not the purpose of this article to trace such a development, we refer to it solely because we wish to be placed on record as holding the belief that it would be greatly to our trading advantage to make the basis of our trading a "Cash" one.

In pleading the advantages of cash trading it would be folly entirely to ignore the advantages accruing from credit in the past and certain forms of credit in the present. Such credit is, and may long remain, entirely necessary and advantageous. Our governments must utilize the advantages of credit. Our local councils must have credit. To enable cash payments for our produce a gigantic system of credit has to operate. Our banking system is largely a system of credits, based on the best of securities. There is a very essential work for the credit system to do, but credit like other good things, has a limit to the sphere of its usefulness.

Credit in addition to it's usefulness has a definite cost. There are times when the cost of credit becomes so great that it looses its "profitableness" if we may be pardoned for using such a term.

In our opinion that stage has been reached in at least so far as the buying our commodities is concerned.

Doubtless in the early days of Canadian history currency was very scarce; personal requirements were elemental and produce of was confined to a small variety of commodities. Under these circumstances barter and credit were absolutely indispensable. As settlement moved westward the same principles were active and if is remarkable that barter should still have a place in trading eggs and butter for groceries—call it if you will the final bartering.
Credit to all was our common experience even as late as four years ago. A credit which first had it basis in the unlimited resources of this new land. A credit which enabled many of us to stay here when otherwise necessity would have driven us out in order to obtain the bare necessities of sustenance.

That credit however has accomplished its mission. In a greater or lesser degree we are all now established. We are fast becoming one of the older settled districts. The tide of emigration no longer leaves its harvest of new settlers to us but carries them past our doors and beyond. Our $10 homesteads are now valuable farms.
We have all piled up assets varying from $5000 upwards.

The very basis of our credit has changed. Changed from that of pioneers in a golden west to that of business men of known financial and moral worth. (We use the term "business men" for in this connection we regard our farmers to be business men in the real sense of the word. Under these circumstances we maintain the only legimate source of credit is the bank.

Generally speaking all the credit that a man obtains from other sources than the bank hurts him as much as it helps him.

To put it plainer still, when a large number of the community decide that they must trade on credit, even of only thirty days duration they create a situation which the local trader will endeavour to meet. In meeting this situation the trader in his turn creates a further necessity for credit. The cost of these lines of credit are so great as to be alarmingly unprofitable.

It may surprize many of our readers to learn that the cost giving credit is sufficient to add twenty per cent to the cost of the goods for which the credit is given.

This remarkable increase in cost is arrived at in the following manner: A merchant who receives cash for his merchandize and pays for them promptly gets a discount on most lines of goods—not all lines—this discount varies from one per cent to ten in a few lines.
This may be averaged at the rate of two per cent. Now when a merchant fails to collect enough to pay his bills promptly he has to pay interest on a loan from his banker or interest to the wholesaler. This interest may vary from six to ten per cent and is subject to incidental expenses such as returned drafts. The cost of these transactions may be averaged at eight per cent. Now when a merchant extends a line of credit to a number he not only lends them the amount of money involved in those purchases and to which in a business sense he is entitled to interest; but he has the following conditions to contend with; A number will come in and pay when the amount is due whilst others from legimate and illegimate reasons will fail to pay until later and yet others will avoid payment entirely.
The most moderate estimate of cost for this is another ten per cent.
This ten per cent having to cover the interest on outstanding monies, the costs of accounting and collections and last but not least—bad debts.

This twenty per cent load represents a heavy handicap upon our merchants in their competition with mail order cash house for your business. Remove that heavy load from their shoulders and we are convinced that profit would accrue like to customer and to merchant. By removing this burden you may cease to add riches to the rich cities and take the little we have got away. Would it not be more near the ideal for the rural dweller to have a useful and complete urban centre within driving distance of his home?

Credit is costing far too much. Credit other than that of the bank is hurting alike the man who gets; the man who gives and with them the whole community
